

DR. BRIGGS'S CASE.

Rev. Dr. Cunningham Speaks Some Plain Words about it.

A SERMON ON PRESBYTERIANISM.

The Supreme Court of the Church has rendered its verdict and there can be no further appeal—An eloquent sermon by Rev. Mr. Alford to Business Men, on "The Christian Merchant."

Rev. Dr. D. A. Cunningham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, arrived home from Washington, D. C., where he attended the Presbyterian General Assembly as a delegate, in time to preach at his church as usual yesterday forenoon and last evening. In the course of a sermon on Presbyterianism last evening he spoke as follows of the case of Rev. Dr. Briggs and the action in that regard of the General Assembly:

The past year has been one of prosperity throughout our beloved Presbyterian Zion. Rich spiritual harvests have been gathered. There is no occasion for despondency in the figures shown by the reports. The treasures of the boards have never come up to the assembly, giving better accounts of themselves. Look at the figures: Home missions, $967,455, a gain of $41,505 over 1892; foreign missions, $1,014,504, a gain of $83,080; education, $106,635, a gain of $14,900; Sunday School work, $96,337, a loss of $656; church erection, $101,643, a loss of $4,945; ministerial relief, $267,579, a gain of $28,331; Freedmen, $156,563, a loss of $15,804; aid for colleges, $88,826, a gain of $32,354. Thus the net gain in all is $178,765. The Women for Home and Foreign Missions contributed $707,880. Bank notes are not notes of discouragement and alarm. There is no other church in the American Protestant world which ranks with our own in the arithmetic of benevolence.

Dr. Bartlett, the pastor of the church where the assembly met, gave a royal welcome to the members of the body. "What is more magnificent than this city of Washington to-day?" were his words to the general assembly on the beautiful opening day, when making his welcome address. It is the pride of all loyal Americans that their capital city is beautiful for situation, and that it has been appropriately and lavishly endowed with massive government buildings, palatial residences, churches, monuments, statues, parks, libraries, museums and art galleries.

A meeting of the general assembly is not the time nor place for rest and recreation. Especially has not this one been. Those who may think that their pastors or elders have had a vacation, will do well to reconsider. The time is precious. Every possible hour is crowded with the strain of important business. Every possible intervening hour is taken up with meetings of committees, where, especially with the more important committees, the strain and labor are no less intense. Thus the work is prepared between times, and pressed upon the assembly whenever opportunity occurs.

That which absorbed much of the time of the assembly was the judicial trial of Dr. Briggs, of Union Theological Seminary, for entertaining views and teaching doctrines contrary to the scriptures and the standards of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America.

When a minister is ordained in the Presbyterian church, he answers affirmatively the following questions:

1. "Do you believe the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be the word of God, the only infallible rule of faith and practice?"

2. "Do you sincerely receive and adopt the confession of faith of this church, as containing the system of doctrine taught in the 'Holy Scriptures'?"

3. "Do you approve of the government and discipline of the Presbyterian church in these United States?"

4. "Do you promise subjection to your brethren in the Lord?"

It was clearly brought out on the trial, that Dr. Briggs held and was teaching doctrines contrary to his ordination vows; that he also held and taught doctrines contrary to the inspiration and authority of the Holy Scriptures, and of the constitution of the Presbyterian church; into the merits of these and the specifications, the general assembly inquired and found them to be true and entered judgment accordingly. There was never a truer verdict rendered.

Whatever was done by the general assembly, the supreme court of the Presbyterian church, let no one say that it was done in a corner, or unfairly, or hastily. Such a year of active energy has never been known in our church, as touching any particular question. Circulars, petitions, memorials, leaflets, special sermons, addresses, arguments, pamphlets, have been circulated by the tens of thousands, apart from the regular channels of the church papers. The fullest and most abundant freedom of debate and privilege was allowed, and the action was free and unconstrained. Dr. Briggs was given five hours to resist the appeal which came up from the presbytery of New York, and afterwards seven hours when the case was tried on its merits. In the face of every plan and argument and expression, the assembly tried to do its duty, constitutionally and in the fear of God, and voted nearly four to one against Dr. Briggs. The judgment finally reached was suspension from the ministry until he repents of his errors.

As to any consequent disruption of our church, I have no fears; on the other hand it will do good. A case of discipline involving, as it does, what the church holds to be vitally erroneous teaching, should not provoke hostility. Constructively, at least, every minister of the Presbyterian church is in an attitude of subordination and subjection to the whole church, when the will of the church has been expressed as her constitution directs. The supreme court of the church is the source of authority as to the constitutionality of proceedings. It is to be expected that every loyal one will abide by the decisions of the high court of last resort. The Presbyterian church is the very embodiment of liberty and charity and justice, and where brethren have come to hold views contrary to her standards, and have asked to have their views examined and passed upon by their co-presbytery, they have been treated, personally, with the greatest regard and consideration. The assembly was characterized by a spirit of patience, fairness, justice and magnanimity to a marked degree, and no criticism of lack of courtesy toward anyone can ever be successfully maintained against it.

The action taken as to the revision of our confession of faith was wise. For several years the subject has been discussed. Many have been in favor of moderate changes. It seemed that these changes were about to be effected. But by a surprising combination of the votes of the extreme conservative and the extreme radical forces the whole movement has failed, and our confession of faith will remain as it is for the present.

Surely, the grand old Presbyterian church, with her 6,500 ministers and 1,000,000 of members, has no occasion to blush at the work done during the year by any of her authorized agencies. The blessing of God has rested upon all of them, and the future opens more gloriously than ever. It is to be hoped that the spiritual fire kindled at the assembly will be carried far and wide to quicken the whole church. Let there be a general uprising of the Lord's people to do valiantly for the extension of His kingdom, for the time is coming when "the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ."

THE CHRISTIAN MERCHANT.

A Fine Sermon by Rev. C. M. Alford Last Evening.

At the Third Presbyterian church last evening the pastor, Rev. C. M. Alford, preached to a large congregation a fine sermon on "The Christian Merchant." He took for his text Prov. 3, 13 and 14: "Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding: For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold."

The key word of Proverbs, he said, is "Wisdom." It is ranked far above gold and silver and precious gems. This wisdom is not merely a cultured mind stored with knowledge of history and philosophy, but it is spiritual wisdom, knowledge of those things which pertain to the higher life. It is wisdom not only of the brain but of the heart. Our text compares the child of God seeking wisdom, to a merchant. This comparison honors the merchant, because from God's standpoint seeking wisdom is the highest, grandest and most necessary employment in life. Christ said, "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all other things shall be added unto you." It is also honoring to the child of God to be compared to a merchant, because the business of a merchant is the most honorable of all businesses.

The business of commerce is next to husbandry in its antiquity. Zion and Tyre were among the oldest cities of the world and they were commercial cities. Isaiah speaking of those who carried on the trade of Tyre said, "Its merchants are princes, and its traffickers the honorable of the earth." He represents them as the royal family of the earth. Royalty and government cannot succeed without them; they are compelled to look up to them. Many times it has been the case that parliaments and cabinets of Europe have waited to hear what a Jewish banker had to say on the subject. Merchandise is the most honorable business in which men engage for two reasons.

First, because trading is man's prerogative.

It separates him from the animal kingdom. Animals exhibit rare intelligence, but no animal ever engaged in buying or selling. Man alone is a trader. It is a human business, not even do the angels engage in it.

Second—it is also an honorable business, because it is the most useful occupation. The merchant binds the human race together by being the medium of exchange. What produces the friendly relations between our nation and the nations of Europe? It is commerce. The merchant's ships crossing the seas bind nation to nation and continent to continent. What would we care for reciprocity, or the All American Congress, were it not for the trade we wish to establish between the United States and other American powers? What does the American business man care for the Chinese exclusion act, except on the ground that retaliation would ruin our trade with China? Commerce makes the world very small, and we are very near neighbors with our antipodes.

The sale of our merchants carry the missionaries and Bibles to foreign lands. The merchant has opened many doors to the church, and given the gospel an entrance to heathen lands.

Wherein is the worldly merchant like the spiritual merchant?

I. The merchant's business is preeminently a business of faith. The merchant's all is often times at hazard. His goods are out on the high sea, surrounded by the storm, they are crossing the desert with savage tribes on every side, they are in perilous buildings, in danger of fire or robbery. Perhaps his interests are in the hands of agents he has never seen, yet he has entrusted his great fortune to them. The man who loads the vessel with his merchandise, putting it into the hands of a captain with whom he is unacquainted, to be carried over the high seas to a foreign port, there to be handled by unknown men, certainly must exercise a great amount of faith. The affairs of men hinge on confidence. Business cannot be carried on unless we trust our fellow men. Certainly it is a business of faith.

So the Christian lives by faith. His whole Christian experience is anchored in faith. The Christian trusts a Saviour he has never seen. He gains all his knowledge of this Saviour through faith in a book, even the authors of which are unknown to him. He believes the blood of this Christ, one drop of which he never saw, is able to cleanse him of all his sins.

Through faith in this Redeemer he expects to enter a heaven the knowledge of which he has gained alone by faith. Faith is the key-note of our religion. Salvation is gained by faith. Good works are not causes for salvation, but they are the fruits of faith.

II. The merchant is a man of energy and zeal.

The merchant is constantly toiling. Unlike the farmer his fortune does not grow while he sleeps. While the farmer rests at night the fruits grow and ripen, the grain shoots forth from the earth, first the blade, then the stalk and the golden head of heavy grain. His wealth is increased by the action of nature. Not so with the merchant, everything is on a stand-still when he is idle. He must always be on the alert. The market is often capricious; high when he wishes to buy and low when he wishes to sell. Fashions change and his goods are out of style, fruits perish and he meets with great losses. If he succeeds at all he must be active—busy all the time—watching the opportunity to take advantage of favorable wind and tide.

So it takes energy and zeal to carry on the work of Christ. The reason for so many stranded wrecks on the shore of Christian life is because of the lack of zeal for the cause.

Christians are content to go to church once a week. In some congregations they regard the Sabbath morning service as a sort of religious routine—a social reunion, and are content with the one service. God's work can no more be successful without infusing into it energy and zeal than can the work of a merchant.

Commerce softens manners and breaks down prejudices. It helps industry, promotes peace and stimulates nature's resources. Social life is based upon commercial contracts, each bringing to the other some product of skill or toil. We cannot supply a fraction of our own wants. We must buy, and we have also in turn something to sell. Business is the outcome of this reciprocal dependence. Each can, each must help the other, or social and civil life would be impossible. Commerce is really work for others; it is unselfish. So is the work of the Christian. He is seeking the welfare of his neighbor.

The christianizing of the money power of the world depends for its principal hope on the merchant. Wherein is the merchant unlike the Christian? Will the merchant of this world put his faith in unstable, treacherous things, the Christian's hope is sure. What a contrast between the perishable things in which the merchant deals, and the merchandise of wisdom! God never changes.

Second—The reward of the Christian is richer.

True the merchant works to benefit his fellows, yet the primary motive is the wealth which will come to him. The reward of the spiritual merchant is grander.

Third—The merchant's gain, unlike that of the Christian is unsatisfying.

Some one once asked A. T. Stewart how much it would take of this world to satisfy him. He replied "just a little more than I have."

As spiritual merchants, our duty is to place before the world the wisdom which is better than gold or silver, and lead the world to seek that which is more precious than rubies.

SENT UP FOR THREE YEARS.

Frank Wilhelm and Charles Bennett Sentenced Saturday.

In the criminal court Saturday Frank Wilhelm, convicted of robbing a man at Wilhelm's hotel, was arraigned, and his motion for a new trial being overruled he was sentenced to three years' confinement in the penitentiary. His counsel excepted to the ruling of the court, and a stay of forty days was granted to allow an appeal to the supreme court. Charles Bennett, convicted of the same robbery, was also sent up for three years, but a similar stay was granted for the same purpose.

In the case of the State vs. Frank Wilhelm and Charles Miller, felony, Charles Miller entered a plea of not guilty; case continued, and defendant remanded to jail.

State vs. John Cotts, adultery; motion to set aside the verdict overruled, and a fine of $30 and costs assessed. James W. Ewing was admitted to practice in this court.

The court adjourned till to-day.

Both sides of the circuit court adjourned Saturday to court in course. In Judge Paull's side the following business was transacted:

Clara G. Carey vs. Kurtz Drug Company; order of sale.

Frank Radok's executor vs. D. G. Morgan; objection to plaintiff's affidavit overruled.

Chicago Are Light Company vs. Standard Insurance Company; defendant's demurrers argued; part of them overruled and part sustained. A similar proceeding was had in Loon Rheims vs. the same insurance company.

Joseph W. Brunell vs. V. J. Adams et al.; decree confirming sale.

Boyd vs. Ackermann; final decree.

Samuel J. Campbell vs. Joseph Lawson; order of reference.

Handlan vs. Handlan; $217 81 of taxes ordered paid.

In Judge Campbell's court the following orders were entered:

Neill & Ellingham vs. National Bank of Santa Barbara; injunction dissolved.

Jones vs. Black; motion for a new trial overruled and judgment.

J. B. and H. C. Jackson, executors and others vs. Geo. W. Cain, and D. W. Cain vs. Neal and others; chancery; reports of special commissioners approved and costs ordered paid.

Cancers in the Neck

Terrible Choking Sensation

"Four years ago, while living in Trinidad, Colorado, a small lump appeared on my neck, which gradually swelled and developed into an intensely painful livid sore with a center filled with granulations like shot. Another sore appeared an inch or two distant, and I had to give up and return to my parents in Brooklyn. Physicians pronounced them cancers and for their removal. I suffered a great deal before the operation, and far worse since. One of the cancers, the smaller one, healed over but was as sore as ever, while the other did not heal and was worse. The physicians told me I would have to submit to another operation, but

I said I would Die First

A similar lump a year ago came on the right side of my neck. For many months I could swallow only liquid or very soft food, and sometimes found great difficulty in speaking aloud. At the suggestion of a friend, I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the only thing I regret is that I did not take it years ago, and thus have prevented terrible suffering, for had I taken the medicine, I sincerely believe I should not have needed any operation at all. These sores are now, after taking two bottles, and, I am satisfied, permanently healed up. The lump on the right side of my neck has nearly all dried up, and no longer causes me any inconvenience. I can eat anything once more, and can use my voice as well as ever."

Completely Gone
